

॥ सर्वेसन्तु निरामयः ॥

PDEAS International Journal of Research in Ayurved and Allied Sciences

Editorial

From The Editor's Desk.....

Prof. Dr. Ragini Patil
Editor-In-Chief, PDEAS IJRAAS

Principal, PDEA's College of Ayurved and Research Centre, Nigdi, Pune, Maharashtra, India-411044

Ayurveda is a complete system of medicine as it encompasses all medicinal branches from Medicine, Surgery, Paediatrics, Gynaecology, Geriatrics, Social & Preventive medicine!

Still, Ayurveda is not typically the first choice for healthcare for most people, as it's not often considered a primary healthcare system.

To elevate Ayurveda to a frontline healthcare system and overcome obstacles at both national and international levels, it's crucial to prioritize fundamental, clinical, and multidisciplinary research. This will boost the scientific credibility of Ayurveda.

The Ayurvedic community must prioritize harnessing Ayurveda's potential to restore health and improve the quality of life for people dealing with metabolic diseases and other non-communicable illnesses to make the Ayurveda, a frontline healthcare system. This focus can significantly benefit the community's well-being.

The Ministry of AYUSH, Government of India, is promoting various schemes such as Ayurgyan, Ayurwathya, and the Champion Services Sector Scheme for establishing Ayurvedic hospitals or Ayurvedic day care centers. The primary objective of these schemes introduced by the AYUSH Ministry is capacity building programs for entrepreneurship development.

The Ayurvedic fraternity must come forward and join the AYUSH Ministry to advance Ayurveda and establish it as a frontline healthcare system, enabling individuals to become successful Ayurvedic practitioners

..... Prof. Dr. Ragini R. Patil
Editor In Chief,
PDEASIJRAAS